

The Bowl of Yogurt and the Great Mosque

By Shane Connelly's AI Childrens Book Generator

A long time ago, in a land far away, lived a great ruler named Suleiman the Magnificent. Suleiman wanted to build a grand mosque for everyone to visit and pray.

He told all the builders, 'Do not accept help from anyone! This is my special project.' The workers worked hard every day to build the beautiful mosque.

One day, an old grandmother watched the mosque being built.

She felt sad and said, 'Oh God, I am poor. I can't build a mosque like Suleiman. But I want to help.' 'I only have this bowl of yogurt,' she said, 'Maybe the workers will accept it.'

The old woman gave her bowl of yogurt to the workers. They remembered the Sultan's orders but couldn't refuse her kindness.

That night, Suleiman had a dream. He saw a big scale. On one side was the grand mosque, and on the other side was the grandmother's bowl of yogurt.

To his surprise, the bowl of yogurt weighed more than the mosque! In the morning, Suleiman went to the workers.

'What did you accept from someone?' he asked. 'An old grandmother insisted we take her bowl of yogurt,' the workers replied.

Suleiman smiled and said, 'Her gift was small but full of love. It weighed more!' And so, the mosque was built with the help of everyone's love and kindness.

The grand mosque stood tall, a symbol of everyone's contributions, big and small. The end.
